

Kennedy King College
Ethics
D. E. Sprague, Instructor
Self-Evaluation: Mid-Semester

You are to compose an essay which provides a summary of your personal evaluation of your work in this course.

In your self-evaluation, it is critical that you address how you believe you have improved as a student in this course.

The final part of your self-evaluation will lay out the “action plan” you will implement over the course of the remainder of the semester. What concrete, specific steps will you take to improve? Remember, “study harder” or “study more” are too general.

Points to consider [must address what you did with respect to extra credit options]:

- Faithful attendance [apprised instructor by email when absent]
- Preparation for class
- Reading notes
- Participation in class
- Class notes
- Regular Review
- Quality of study
- Quality of quizzes
- Test-taking
- Using test error analysis to create action plans
- Implementing action plans
- Study skills
- Following directions
- Anticipating potential questions for the test
- Completion of assignments
- All extra credit options (take-home portion of each test, revision and rewrite of Melching essay, two theatre outing options, film analysis)

Yes, these should be word processed. ☺